

Bio:

MARIE WILHELMINE ANDERS aka MOMENTMUSIK is a wanderer in music.

Musically and instrumentally trained since her earliest childhood, she received her first technical training as a sound engineer at GDR television. She played keyboards in a punk band in the East Berlin underground music scene, created field recordings and sound installations, studied classical composition at the University Of The Arts Berlin and graduated at the Musikhochschule Stuttgart. There she was an active part of the experimental improvisational scene playing piano as well as a set of electronics. She founded two ensembles and initiated and directed "momentmusik" — a concert series for experimental and improvised music which established the connection between her ensembles and the national and international scenes.

In 2005 she ended her concert activity, moved back to Berlin and began producing her music using Cubase and publishing it under the pseudonym Marie Wilhelmine Anders. After discovering the poems of the Scottish poet R.L.Stevenson, she began to develop her new electronic musical language incorporating and building upon his verses. Marie's conceptual thinking and her craft as a modern classical composer allow her to congenially translate his lyrics into a modern electronic language, influenced by techno, electronica and ambient music. Between 2018 and 2021 she released 4 albums which referred to Stevenson's work (including a remix album of her tracks). As a producer, Marie likes to work alone and independently. She is also increasingly in demand as a remixer.

Her best friend writes: "Marie works her way out of all restrictions and experiments with styles and musical directions. I am impressed by her accuracy in everything she does. She is the secret Phoenix among my friends, who every time after it has turned to ashes, puts on a new and even more splendid plumage. I have great admiration for her uncompromising artistry. One speaks of the Phoenix as an eternally youthful bird. And he can fly."
